

Biography of Video Case Study Investigators

Christina M. Yongue, MPH, MCHES is an Associate Professor at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, in the Department of Public Health Education. She has been a member of the Greensboro Health Disparities Collaborative for 16 years, where she coordinated and managed NIH-funded research studies which were effective at identifying racial healthcare disparities in cancer and eliminating them, such as: (1) The Cancer Care and Racial Equity Study, and (2) The Accountability for Cancer Care through Undoing Racism and Equity (ACCURE) Study. She is a founding associate member of Sisters Network Greensboro, which is a collaborating organization with the ACCURE study. As a community-engaged volunteer, she served on the outreach committee for the Renaissance Community Co-op. She served as the Principal Investigator during the development of this course. She is the primary contact for case study correspondence, E-mail: cmyongue@uncg.edu

Crystal E. Dixon Crystal T. Dixon, MPH, MA is an Associate Professor of the Practice in the Department of Health and Exercise Science at Wake Forest University (WFU). Dixon's research explores the intersection of environmental racism, sustainability, and public health. She is currently conducting research that explores the intersection of disaster resilience, climate change, and public health in the Caribbean. Dixon is also contributing to research exploring the use of green infrastructural solutions to address flooding impacting low-income communities.

Dixon is the Founder of Mango Consulting, a company that guides companies in adopting eco-friendly and inclusive practices to minimize environmental harm impacting humanity. Dixon is a member of the Greensboro Health Disparities Collaborative. She serves on the Board of Directors for The Partnership Project and CleanAIRE NC. She served as the Co-Principal Investigator during the development of this case study. E-mail: dixonct@wfu.edu

Courtney E. Caiola, Ph.D., MPH, RN is an Associate Professor in the Department of Nursing Science at the East Carolina University, College of Nursing. Courtney has over 20 years of experience in family and community nursing in both the domestic and global setting. Courtney's experience as a practicing health care professional has greatly impacted her program of research which focuses on the social and economic determinants of health, including racism, for women at risk for or living with chronic illness. Courtney has a particular interest in intersectional approaches and community engaged research methods. She served as the Co-Principal Investigator during the development of this case study. We would also like to extend our gratitude to our videographer, graphic designer, and video-editor, Jenna Shad, who worked tirelessly to achieve the vision for this project. To our colleagues in the Department of Public Health Education at UNCG, to the trainers with the Racial Equity Institute, and the community leaders in the Guilford Anti-Racism Alliance who all offered support and encouragement during this process.

Lastly, this work would not have been possible without the financial support of the Association for Prevention and Teaching Research and the Office of Disease Prevention and Health Promotion. We are grateful for affording us the wonderful opportunity to enhance the knowledge of health professionals across the nation.

~In memory of Ralph Johnson for his leadership with RCC and representation of northeast Greensboro.~

~In memory of Nettie Coad for her passion, vision, and dedication for the GHDC and racial equity.~
